How to train a Cat

How to train a Cat

Whether you are a new cat parent or an experienced one, you are bound to know that these adorable feline furballs are incredibly loving and affectionate, and would prefer nothing but to spend time with their favourite hooman. Our furry little feline friends are also unmistakably intelligent as they are playful, and can be quite efficient at picking up new tricks through cat training to wow their human parents.

And as clever cats are, they can easily be trained to learn new tricks at any age through cat training. But the best time to get them to learn tricks is as kittens, when they are full of energy and curiosity. Kitten training through positive reinforcement is the best to yield good results.

This article discusses the different ways you can help your little kitty learn great new tricks and how to go about training them successfully.

Tips on how to train a kitten

Cat parents often wonder how to train a kitten. Given how intelligent and loving feline furries are, you can easily train a cat with these following tips before cat training them complex tricks.

- Train your kitten to sit and stand on command

  When it comes to kitten training, cat parents are worried about how to train a kitten. The trick is to begin easy to get your kitty to become familiarised with kitten training. Training your kitten to sit and stand on command using food or toys as a positive reinforcement can be a beginning when it comes to how to train a cat to behave.

- Litter-train your kitten

  Worried about how to litter train a kitten or how to potty train a cat? Although how to potty train a cat is the responsibility of the mothers, you can get them to learn by kitten training them by putting them in the litter box every hour or so, until they pee or poop there. If you are wondering how to litter train a kitten, use treats to motivate them every time they use the litter tray, and reap the benefits of how to potty train a cat.

- Train your kitten to use bed

  When it comes to the question of how to train a cat, training your little furball to use a bed by directing their attention to it using kitten treats or fresh catnip on the bed. Getting them their own cat bed can be a positive step towards cat training, and moving forward with how to train a cat to behave.

- Train your kitten to eat

  Getting kittens to learn to eat solid foods can be a major win for you when it comes to how to train a cat. In this type of cat training, you can begin by adding solid food in small quantities to their formula. You can also try hand feeding them Whiskas cat food and see immediate results for how to train a cat to behave.

- Socialise your kitten

  You know how to litter train a kitten, but you must also get them to socialise. To train a cat to be more relaxed around people, encourage your feline friend by offering delicious treats every time they behave around new people.

Benefits to training a kitten

The best way to train a cat is to treat them with the love, which can help you out with how to train a kitten. Additionally, here are some more benefits associated with how to train a cat:

- Cat parents faced with how to train a cat can effectively teach their furry munchkins good behaviour.
- To train a cat also helps in regulating their unwanted behaviour such as aggression and helps them learn tricks.
- Learning how to train a cat enables you to be more communicative with your little munchkin.
- To train a cat, especially in their kittenhood, also contributes to the development of their motor functions and encourages them to be more active physically.
- Although how to potty train a cat is a frequent challenge faced by cat parents, once trained, it can save you the time and effort of having to clean up every time your kitty relieves themselves.

FAQs

All Questions Play

Filter by

- All Questions
- Play

13

1. How to play with kittens?

   If your kitten is playful with you, you can play games like fetch and chase. Playing helps kittens develop their motor skills faster and deepens the bond between the kitten and its hooman parent. Just make sure you are gentle, and this can also help you with how to train your cat.

2. Are kittens easy to train?

   Wondering how to train a kitten? Be kind and gentle! The best and easiest way to train your dignified little furry munchkins is through positive reinforcement like cat treats, catnip, and cat toys that encourage them to respond to how to train your cat.

3. How long one can leave a kitten alone?

   Generally, it is advised against leaving cats alone for more than 4 hours till they are 5 months of age. It is important to be attentive to their needs while they are still trying to be independent with their lifestyle, which can also be helpful when it comes to how to train a cat to behave.

4. Can we let kitten sleep with us?

   Kittens are adorable as little balls of fur, and can be allowed to sleep on the bed with you. Not only is it fun for you and your feline, but it also contributes to creating a deeper, more meaningful bond, making it easier for cat parents to learn how to train your cat.

5. At what age one can train a kitten?

   When it comes to how to train your cat, most kittens are obedient, curious, highly intelligent, and playful, which makes it easy for cat parents to start training them as early as from the age of 3 months by treating them with good food and toys as positive reinforcement.

6. What to do if a kitten bites you?

   Wondering what to do if kitten bites me? If the bite breaks your skin, it is important to get the area treated and consult a physician. If your kitten is unvaccinated against diseases like rabies, you would need immediate medical attention to prevent infections and septicaemia.

7. Why do kittens grab your hand and bite?

   Biting and scratching, although painful, are important communications within the feline community, to establish a circle of trust and understanding. And hence, kittens often tend to grab their owners' hands and bite as a form of showing love, affection, and bonding.

8. At what age do kittens stop biting?

   It is common for cats undergoing the single kitten syndrome to frequently bite and scratch their human parents. However, annoying as it is, kittens and biting generally stop biting upon reaching the age of maturity lasting between 6 to 8 months of age.

9. How do I get my kitten to stop biting?

   Kittens and biting can be painful. Effective ways on how do you get a kitten to stop biting are training them to play with toys instead of your hand and using the voice to redirect their action, if you are worried about kitten bites me.

10. How do you tell if your cat is bored of their food?

    Housecats often relieve their boredom by playing with their food, especially if they are bored with it. Pet cats and kittens rarely have to hunt their food and end up swatting or poking at their food to stimulate their senses.

11. Do cats play with live food?

    Are you wondering why my cat plays with his food? Cats often play with food to hone their hunting instinct and in making sure that their prey is healthy and fit for consumption. Playing also tires out the prey, making them too exhausted to retaliate.

12. Why does my cat want me watch him eat his food?

    Although cats are introverted and shy by their nature, they are also affectionate and sociable. Wanting their favourite humans to watch them eat food is a part of social or affection feeding, where your kitty genuinely enjoys your company while eating.

13. How do I know if my cat likes his food?

    Cats are enthusiastic foodies, and usually love the food they are offered by their favourite humans. However, signs such as licking the food bowl clean, or licking paws after eating indicate that your furry feline has really enjoyed the meal of Whiskas wet food.

SEE ALL

READ MORE

READ MORE

READ MORE

READ MORE

Source URL: https://www.whiskas.me/care/kitten/play/how-to-train-a-cat