Know More About Cat Check-Ups

Feline furries are strong, energetic creatures known for their playfulness, cuteness, curiosity, and adventurous nature. While they might not really have nine lives, cats are incredibly resistant and enduring in the face of ailments, and can enjoy a lifespan of 13 to 15 years on average. In comparison to outdoor cats, housecats growing up in a safe and secure environment enjoy a longer, healthier lifespan. However, it is still important to consult a veterinarian doctor from time to time in order to make sure your feline munchkin is physically in their prime, and has a long, loving life to enjoy with you. So, in this article, let us discuss when and how to take cat to vet, cat vet check up cost, cat health check up, and when to take newborn kittens to vet.

Importance of Regular Cat Health Check-Ups

Cat health check ups are incredibly beneficial for every feline furry. In addition to making sure your little munchkin is physically well and thriving, regular cat health check ups can inform you about their instinctive needs and dispositions, figure out a balanced diet for their well-being, and update their vaccination. This article answers your common questions regarding cat check up, such as when to take cat to vet for emergency or what is the vet check up cost.

What Veterinarian will check during a wellness examination?

Cat parents frequently worry about taking my cat to the vet for the first time or what tests the vet might require. All veterinarians follow a common cat health check up routine when it comes to a wellness examination. In addition to checking a cat for its weight, temperature, coat condition, physical gait and stance, veterinary physicians also check the condition of their heart and lungs. Based on these preliminary examinations, a veterinarian can suggest any additional test, if required.

- Tips General Cat Health

As a cat parent, it is important to tend to your cat's needs and pay attention to warning signs that might indicate illness, such as a drastic change in behaviour, frequent vomiting, lethargy, profuse urination, diarrhoea, and loss of appetite.

- Cat Vaccinations

Cat vaccinations in cat check up play a crucial role in keeping away potentially life-threatening diseases and making sure your kitty can carry on with its everyday adventures.

- Benefits of Neutering Your Cat

Neutering or spaying can have several health benefits to keep in mind. Neutering or spaying during cat health check up can eliminate the risks of testicular cancer in male cats and mammary cancer in female cats. Furthermore, without the drive to mate, neutered cats can have a calmer and more friendly disposition.

- Understanding Your Cat's Behaviour

Paying attention to your cat's body language and general behaviour can inform a lot about how your furry munchkin is feeling. Tail movements, as well as shifts in their moods and behaviour can make you aware of potential concerns or need for attention.

- Dental Care for Cats

Most cats over the age of 4 suffer from gingivitis and periodontal diseases. Senior cats too are exposed to the risks of poor dental health because of their advanced age. In order to ensure your kitty is free from the risks of dental disorders, microbial actions, and tooth decay, it is important to take good dental care by brushing your cat's teeth regularly.

- Maintaining a Healthy Weight and Body Condition for Your Cat

Feline obesity is one of the most concerning health disorders in cats which can hamper their lifespan and day-to-day activities. So, it is important to ensure your cat has a healthy body weight depending on its age and breed.

- Senior Cats: How to Care for Your Aging Cat

1. Q:

What is spraying and marking in cats?

A:

Male cats spraying is considered a vital part of feline communication. While most outdoor cats spray to mark territories, spraying in household cats is more instinctive. Female cat spraying and urine marking in cats are also for attracting mates.

2. Q:

Do cats spray when happy?

A:

While spraying can have several connotations, it does not generally indicate happiness in cats. Cat urine spraying is usually used for urine marking in cats to indicate territories, warding off predators, and attracting potential mates when in heat.

3. Q:

How do I get my cat to stop spraying?

A:

Since male cats spraying is mostly associated with non-neutered cats looking for a mate in heat, getting your cat spayed or neutered is a possible long-term solution. Additionally, veterinarians may recommend medications like Fluoxetine or Clomipramine with a high success rate.

4. Q:

Is cat spraying the same as peeing?

A:

Cat parents often wonder, why do cats spray? Contrary to popular belief, cat peeing and spraying are not the same. While cat pee involves your furry relieving itself, cat spray is more intentional to communicate certain things like marking territories.
